Atlanta Constitution

I write you from the city of Charleston the city by the sea. I am now looking afar off upon the distant waves, afar towards Fort Sumter, the historic place where the war began. I was ruminating about that small beginning of a sad and terrible conflict. That feeble cannonading that hardly shook the land and did not disturb the calm and peaceful sea, but it quivered the heart of a great nation, and was the shock that smothered peace and was the shock that smothered peace and sounded the call of battle and of death. I wish I lived by the sea, not all the time, for I love our hills and moun-tains dearly, but I would like to have a home down here where I could bring the good wife and children and let them feast upon new scenes and look with rapture and with wonder upon the might ocean. How calm, how peaceful when at rest, how terrible in the storm. I believe such things enlarge us and make us better. They dignify the great Creator and fill us with awe and make us conscious of our own humility while conscious of our own humility, while sitting now upon the wharf watching the restless waters I cannot wonder at the emotion of Lord Byron when he wrote that sublime and beautiful verse

"Roll on thou deep and dark blue Ocean, roll." There is surely something in nature that moulds a man to her image. Not all men, but most men. They say that blood will tell, but blood is not all. Blooded stock, whether of man or beast, courteous he is nothing. If an East Tennessean is not sharp and close and calculating he is nothing. And so between the seacost and the mountains between the seacost and the mountains we find all grades and all mixtures. I I have just visited three pleasant villages in South Carolina and mingled with their people and enjoyed there for they are in no hurry to get through life, and content with their lot. I never saw a merchant hunting for trade. I never saw one like Jot Camp, of Rome, taking the streets to induce custom, and working and tolling.

smart and their motto is "Push along, keep moving."

It was the bracing, pervous air of the mountains that made Moore and Marsh and Kiser and Rhode Hill and Wyley and Wyly and Peters and Doughtery and many others. Evan Howell has mountain stock in him, and so has Hemphill and Grady and that is why they succeed. They are the stock that will climb up and succeed without capital or friends. Nothing can keep them down. A Macon man will succeed in Macon but he would hardly succeed in Atlanta, unless he had a good backing and some special advantages. Some Charleston men who moved to Atlanta have succeeded, but they had abundant capital and had North Georgia boys to help them. There is a wide difference between Macon and Atlanta in their methods of business. and Atlanta in their methods of business. The Atlanta men walk faster, talk faster The Atlanta men walk faster, talk faster and chew more totacco and give more bunk notes, and dun harder and brag eternally on Atlanta. Well, that is all right. That is business, and that is what makes Atlanta. Why, a man can break all to pieces in Atlanta and rise again in two months and smile esrenely.

Venerable Charleston I. Y have

Venerable Charleston! I have not been here for 30 years. When I was a been here for 30 years. When I was a merchant I used to trade here. Twice a year I made my pilgrimage here and bought my goods, and now it makes me sad to wander around in search of the old sad to wander around in search of the old familiar places and find new signs. I Saw one hanging on a wall; it was corroding from the iron hand of time, but it was there—the same old sign, "Hyatt McBurney & Co." But they were not there, and no succession. The sign was all. Happily I found one, but only one old friend, Mr. McGahan, the honest Scotchman, now of Edwin, Bates & Co., and the head of the house. He is the only one left of the old stock I used to deal with, a noble gentleman of the pure Charleston type. His house has a branch in Atlanta which shows his business sagacity. Sitting down by him, I saked before hidding you good night, 'will give any only one left of the old stock, I seed to deal with, a noble gentleman of the pure of the pu to be. And then I met that lovable man, "I felt more thankful," said he, "than I to be. And then I met that lovable man, My Maryland Randall, whose name is familiar to every household, and whose welcome comes from the heart as well as from the hand. And that sterling, solid son of Erin, Pat Walch, whom the people of Georgia delight to honor, and will yet honor. I love this good old Georgia city for its happ memories, and especially because Mrs. Arp was educated there, and her education was solid—solid as a rock—and she can do a sum now in her head quicker than I can on a slate, and is as sure in figures as an almanac. I How He Courted Betsey. is as sure in figures as an almanac. I was taken sick in Charleston once, at the Pavilion hotel, when old Mr. Butterfield was the proprietor, and I thought I had the yellow fever and was going to die. So I ran away with the fever on me, for I wanted to die at home, and I reached home and for two months I was at the home and for two months I was at the door of death, and living I did languish and languishing did live, and one day a sweet, pretty girl with beautiful hazel eyes and raven hair, came to see me and brought me some flowers, and as I looked in her soft, sympathetic face I rallied and determined to get well. And I did. And I'm well yet, and so is she, and her children are mine and mine are hers.

The Leaning Tower of Pisa.

The tower has such a strange effect on The tower has such a strange effect on you! You see that the stairs are very steep in some places, and that the inner wall crowds down upon you in an unpleasant way. The effect is a little like being in the cabin of a ship at sea; you realize a kind of undulating motion, without having the visible cause of it before your eyes. We stopped to rest; a small window was at hand; we looked down into the interior of the tower. It was like a decu round shaft that had been Blooded stock, whether of man or beast, will not keep up on the piney woods. It will degenerate, we can almost tell where men came from by looking at them and talking to them. The mountains produce a shifty, thrifty, active people, always smart, always in a hurry. The plains produce a quiet slow moving, dignified population, who love their case and care for their comfort and take time to entertain their friends. If a Charleston man or a Savannah man is not dignified and courteous he is nothing. If an East much; it was with some difficulty that we kept from slipping out of the door level with the stairs when the tower reeled over on our side. I wonder that we had the courage to complete the ascent. Towers have fallen before now; leaning towers are not expected to stand any longer than they choose to. The carth has sunk about the Pisa tower, so that you go down saveral steps to get to hunting for trade. I never saw a merciant hunting for trade. I never saw one like Jot Camp, of Rome, taking the streets to induce custom, and working and toiling for business. That is all right and I admire him and his diligence, but I can't help noticing the difference. Then there is Patillo, of Carterwille, I've watched him as a typical man, a genuine North Georgian, as restless as the troubled sea, working all the time and watching for opportunities. He buys at venture and sells on sight and uses the bank and duns his customers and deals in anything that offers a dollar of profit. Atlanta is that same way, for Atlanta is made up of North Georgians. Most all their successful men came from there, and they are smart and their motto is "Push along, keep moving."

It was the bracing, nervous air of the shaken to pieces; every stone trembled perceptibly; the air was whistling about our ears; one man did it all! He sprang on to one of the bells and set it swinging, then leaping gayly on to another, and at last caught the big bell to the windward and got its thick black tongue in motion; so he skipped lightly from one to the other, dodging the roaring monsters as they heaved about him. Escape was impossible while this concert was inimpossible while this concert was in progress.

The green hills were about us on the inland side; the country was as flat as a floor from. Plsa to the sea. Away off in the corner by the shore lay Leghorn. Should we not go to Leghorn when it lies but an hour hence by rail? We thought it best, and as soon as the bells were quiet we went down the corkscrew stalkway and came to the outer door in

They Were on the String.

"I saw something new up in Wisconsin the other evening," observed a Chicagoan who had a satchel in his hand, and who was on his way home. "A patent medicine man was selling something or other from a carriage in which he had a very pretty young woman and a gasoline lamp. The lady sang one or two songs very sweetly and then the man talked and sold his nostrum at a dollar a bottle.

sweetly and then the man talked and sold his nostrum at a dollar a bottle.

When he had disposed of thirty or forty bottles he said: 'Now, gentlemen, before bidding you good night I will give an exhibition of the wonderful magnetic powers of my wife, who sits here by my side. I hold is my hand a common piece of thread. Now, one of you take hold of the end of it and walk off and then let all the others take hold of it, and at the signal which I will give she will take hold of the other end and you will feel the shock instantly.'

"About 150 men sud boys grasped the bread and walked off about half a block with it. 'Now keep perfectly quiet,' said

How He Courted Betsey.

The following is Artemus Ward's description of why he courted Betsey Jane: "There were many affectin' ties which made me hanker after Betsey Jane. Her father's farm jined ourn; their cows and ourn squenched their thist at the same spring; our old mares both had stars in their forreds; the measles broke out in both families at nearly the same tim; our parents (Betsey Jane's and mine), slept regularly every Sunday in the same meetin' house, and the nabors used to obsarve, 'How thick the Wards and Peasles air.' It was a sublime sight in the spring of the year to see our several mothers (Betsey's and mine) with their gowns pinned up so that they could't sile 'em, effeckshunitely bilin' sosp together and aboosin' their nabors."

- Blunkin and his wife had been indulging in a family discordance, and finally Mrs. B. exclaimed: "Well, I've got my opinion of any man who talks as you do." "Oh, have you? Well. you you do." "Oh, have you? Well, you can keep it if you want to," "No, I can't either, it's so awfully bad already Georgia Plantation for Sale.

SITUATED ten miles Southeast of Elberton, Elbert County, Ga., containing 1000 acres, 200 of red or mulatto land, the remainder of a gray or dark nature. There is about sixty or seventy acres of bottem land on the creek and branch, a quantity of original forest, and some of the heaviest timbered pine land there is in this section. Has two convenient patures, one well sodded with Bermuda Grass, with a branch of running water in each. Great deal of the land is in a high state of cultivation, adapted more to grain and stockraising than cotton. The dwelling house is a large eight-room building, with plazza in front and portice on back; all the rooms plastered inside, with a fire-place in each; good cook-room and pantry attached; good smoke-house, meal-house, servant-house, grain-house, potato-house, with a well of splendid water in the yard. Has a two-story barn, with six stalls, a double cornhouse, oat-house carriage-house, wagon-shed, gin-house and packing screw. Has three tenant settlements. Situated in a good neighborhood, convenient to three churches and one school. Haz a splendid orchard on the place. Price $6,000, part cash, balance on time. For further information, address G. G.
